

Havasupai (Havasu Falls)

4 Day Tour

Havasu Falls is just one of several majestic waterfalls found on the Havasupai reservation that are anywhere from 75 to 200 ft (22.9 to 76 km) high. While you will not see the amazing vistas Grand Canyon is known for, you will experience some of the most beautiful waterfalls in the United States. This is the perfect hike for novice adventurers, a family vacation or a getaway with a group of friends. We will stay in a campground along the Havasu Creek for several nights. We spend our days hiking to remote waterfalls, exploring the area and of course, swimming in turquoise blue pools under stunning waterfalls.

Difficulty	OH @#%&!	Solitude	Number of backpacking (miles/km)	Elevation changes (feet/m)
3	2	1	20/32.2 (without day hike)	2,100/640 (without day hike)

Day 1

After pickups in Phoenix or Flagstaff, we head to the trailhead at Hualapai Hilltop. Once we arrive, we will hike 10 miles to the campground and descend about 2,200 feet. The hike to the campground takes about 5 hours and along the way we pass through the village of Supai, which has a post office, general store and cafe. In fact, Supai is the most remote village in the USA with no access by car—U.S. mail is carried out by horse— or helicopter.

Day 2

After breakfast, we will hike downstream from the campground on a 6-mile round trip hike to the remote Beaver Falls. Along the trail between Mooney and Beaver Falls, you will cross the Havasu Creek several times and your path will take you through fields of canyon grape. We can also go further and hike to the Colorado River at the bottom of the Grand Canyon. Depending on what the group wants to do, we may hike anywhere from 6 to 16 miles (9.7 to 25.7 km).

Day 3

Today is spent exploring the four waterfalls in the area: Havasu, Mooney, Rock Falls and the new Navajo Falls. The last two falls were created in the flood of 2008. There are plenty of places to swim and great scenery around every corner. We may also head into the village of Supai for a lunch of Indian Tacos (this is optional and not included in package price). Total hiking distance for the day is around 5 to 7 miles (8 to 11.3 km).

Day 4

We follow the same trail we came in, but this time we head up 2,200 (670.6 m) feet over 10 miles (16.1 km). The hike up is relatively gradual until the last 1.2 miles (1.9 km), which we take slow and easy. Once we pack up the vehicles, the group is welcome to join the guides for lunch in the Route 66 town of Seligman, AZ. Lunch is optional and not included in the package
